Learn How To Play Acoustic Guitar Chords

By Michael Arthur

When you first start to learn acoustic guitar chords, there are several pitfalls that you should be aware of. These tips come from 20+ years of playing, and 5+ years of full-time teaching guitar- Don't take the advice lightly!

Here are the main problems I've seen in the last five years:

1. When students first start to learn acoustic guitar chords, they look at each individual finger. That's fine, and you should- at first. As soon as possible, though, you want to see a SHAPE for each guitar chord, not just individual fingers and strings. How do you learn to see your guitar chords as a shape? Play faster. How do you learn to play faster?...
2. ...USE A METRONOME! This should be your FIRST priority. Don't even worry about playing any acoustic guitar chords until you can at least SOMEWHAT feel a beat. You don't have to be great at it, but if you can't keep up with the metronome without an instrument, why would you think you'd be able to play acoustic guitar chords too??? Spend a LOT of time tapping along with the radio, metronome, clock or...
3. ...USE A FRIEND. Guys- you get good at something by doing it a LOT. Acoustic guitar chords are no different. Hang around musicians as often as possible, and ask for LOTS of advice. Seriously. Do it. Now.
4. Your fingers are MUSCLES!- All muscles start out weak, and when you work out, you get stronger and faster. Same thing with learning acoustic guitar chords. You have to spend time each day "working out" your fingers. The first SEVERAL times you try to play acoustic guitar chords, your fingers will be weak- keep going!

(BTW- if you skip a day at first, you'll have to start almost completely over. Once you've been playing for a while, it won't be a big deal to take a couple of days off. But at first, your body wants to see how serious you are about what you're asking it to do- acoustic guitar chords are hard!!!)

5. There's no extra credit for doing something one time. The goal is not to just play a chord once, the goal is to be able to play ANY chord we wish, as fast and as often as I want! DON'T STOP in the middle!!!! Doing a chord once or twice is cool, but songs last four minutes!!! It takes a SERIOUS amount of endurance to play a whole song- Remember: We're working out!

There they are! There are obviously other elements and practice methods that would help- you can find more of them at the website listed in the resource box- but start with these.

- If you:
- Practice at a steady beat,
 - Increase speed so you challenge yourself each time
 - Go for longer than you "think" you should (endurance... Don't be dumb with it, but push yourself!)
 - Don't get frustrated (muscles- they're muscles...) and
 - Build your support group. Friends. Music friends.

...You should be able to accomplish any goal you wish when you learn to play acoustic guitar chords.

Learn How To Play Guitar For Beginners Online

By Rick Lee

Before actually learning how to play guitar you should know a few very important things. The main thing you should only keep in mind is that a song is made from notes.

If you want to play the notes correctly then you should familiarize yourself with the chords. To be more precise, the chords are a series of notes played in unison.

If the guitar player knows how to play them then the result will be very melodic.

If you're a beginner the first thing you will learn will be to know the chords. You can't play correctly if you don't know the chords. The G, C, D and A are the easiest chords on the guitar.

Easy means that you won't have to use many fingers to play them, just three fingers will do the trick.

When you push down on the strings at the fret on the guitar neck it's called playing chords. While pushing down the strings you should strum the strings before the sound hole and there you have it: you're playing the guitar.

Many professionals recommend that you should use an acoustic guitar in order to learn how to play. When you learn the basics you can start using an electric guitar.

If you're looking for some tips in regard to chords then you should read on. You shouldn't push the strings down too hard.

Everything stays in the balance and in time you'll see how this works. The chord won't sound perfect when you press down too hard or too soft.

Also, you might want to level down the wrist of the left hand in order to loosen the strain. If you ignore this step your guitar will make buzzing sounds instead of great tunes.

Not to mention that in time you'll experience cramping and pain in your hand. Technique is the key to guitar playing!

At first it's recommended that you play only songs with less chord movements. When you can play correctly all these easy songs you can start playing blindfolded.

Take a good look at any professional player and you'll see that they don't look at the fret while playing except for the times when they must play a complex chord.

It's very important that you memorize the hand movements of all the guitar chords. The fingers and the hand must touch very the guitar very naturally and if you practice day by day that shouldn't be a problem.
